WEBSITE GROWTH AUDIT

Burgess Mee

burgessmee.com | London, UK | Prepared for Antonia Mee and Peter Burgess

An award winning trauma informed family law firm with several offices is a strength, but a missing contact form and dead award links appear to cost you enquiries.

What I found on your website

What I saw	What it costs you	The fix
The main call to action appears to be 'find out more' or a bare icon linking to /contact#form, and no contact form or fields appear on the homepage.	A client in a stressful moment has no quick way to ask for help from the page.	A short confidential enquiry form on the homepage.
The hero appears to describe the firm as 'family law' in one line and 'family and private wealth law' in another, and no private wealth services appear in the list.	Mixed descriptions confuse a client choosing the right firm.	One clear positioning line and a matching services list.
The Times Best Law Firms badge appears to link to #, a team tile appears to read 'Burgess Mee' with a placeholder image, and two partners appear to share the same placeholder photo.	Dead badges and missing photos weaken the proof you rely on.	Working award links and real team photos.
Awards appear only as logos with no context, no client testimonials or outcomes appear, and the services section appears to list no specific services.	A nervous client needs proof and clear services before calling.	Described awards, anonymised outcomes and a detailed services list.
