WEBSITE GROWTH AUDIT

Forest Hill Real Estate Yorkville

foresthillyorkville.com | Toronto | Prepared for Catherine Himelfarb Borden and Rebecca Himelfarb

A Hazelton Avenue base and a luxury area focus are strengths, but form glitches and dated bio copy appear to cost you sellers.

What I found on your website

What I saw	What it costs you	The fix
The page appears to show 'Thank you for your message' before any form is submitted, a valuation widget with raw steps '1. 1', '2. 2', '3. 3', and 'What's your home really worth?' twice.	A broken valuation tool loses the seller leads it exists to capture.	A clean valuation form with one confirmation.
Forms appear to show a Middle Name field, the internal label 'Email Trigger Source' and 'OtherInterest' with no space, and the consent text repeats about four times.	Internal labels and clutter make a luxury brand look unfinished.	Short form with clean labels and one consent.
The bio appears to say 'has adapted and grown in these past months' and 'Things have changed, but not our commitment', and a blog post says Interior Design Trends for 2025.	Pandemic era wording and old posts signal an inactive site.	Current bio and fresh content.
Testimonials appear with first names or initials only, one mentions selling a farm, and the brand appears as three versions, Forest Hill Real Estate Yorkville, Forest Hill Yorkville and Forest Hill Real Estate.	Thin proof and mixed names weaken a luxury pitch.	Named results, relevant reviews and one brand name.
