WEBSITE GROWTH AUDIT

Stanchieri Family Law

stanchierifamilylaw.com | Toronto | Prepared for the Stanchieri team

Stanchieri has a large team of lawyers and a clear structure. The homepage gives a visitor no clear next step and shows no proof, at the moment a client in a stressful situation is choosing a lawyer.

What I found on your website

What I saw	What it costs you	The fix
The closing copy says Book a legal consultation, but no scheduling link is provided. Only a Contact Us link appears, and the hero has no action button.	A client who is ready to book has to find a contact page, and many will call the next firm.	A Book a consultation button in the hero and closing section, linked to a calendar.
No testimonials, client outcomes or credentials appear on the homepage, and the 2008 founding date and team size appear only in hidden page data.	Family law clients decide on trust. Without visible proof, they compare on price or call the firm with reviews.	Named reviews, your 2008 history and team size shown near every consultation button.
The lawyer headshot grid repeats the same people several times, and about a dozen images in the services and retainers sections have no image source.	Repeated rows push content down, and missing images leave visible gaps on a page that is meant to look reliable.	One clean team grid and every image in place.
The only listed email is support@stanchierifamilylaw.com, and the page title shows as Home.	A support address looks like customer service, not legal intake, and a page title of Home wastes your search listing.	A dedicated consultation email and a search title that names the firm and city.

What your new website will do for Stanchieri Family Law

- A consultation first homepage with a hero button, a short intake form and a phone number above the fold.
- Proof beside every button: named reviews, outcomes and your 2008 history.
- Practice area pages written to rank for searches like divorce lawyer Toronto and child custody lawyer Toronto.
