WEBSITE GROWTH AUDIT

Kalra Family Law

kalrafamilylaw.com | University Avenue, Toronto | Prepared for Shelly Kalra and team

Kalra Family Law has a clean, scannable layout, Book Online and Book Now buttons, and a team of lawyers. Visible typos, a mismatched address and no client proof hold back a firm that clients must trust in a hard moment.

What I found on your website

What I saw	What it costs you	The fix
Visible typos: ensure the your child's best interests are protected, and Book a free consulation for a custom will. The informal line don't charge silly fees also sits on a legal page.	A family law firm sells care and precision. Typos on the page clients read first weaken both.	A proofread build with a consistent, professional tone.
The Google review link points to 425 University Ave suite 300, while the contact section lists 55 University Avenue, Suite 1100.	A client who cannot tell which address is right may go to the wrong place, and a mismatch makes the firm look disorganised.	One verified address across the site and your Google profile.
No client testimonials or case results appear, and the trust badges are images with no visible ratings. The four process steps have blank titles.	Family law clients choose on trust. Unrated badges and blank process steps do not give them a reason to pick you.	Named reviews, visible ratings and a clear four step process.
The Book a Free Consultation button repeats many times, and there is no contact form, chat or WhatsApp. Social icons have no labels.	Clients who will not call or book online have no other way to reach you, and repeated buttons dilute the main action.	One primary button, a short intake form and a chat or WhatsApp option.

What your new website will do for Kalra Family Law

- A consultation first homepage with one clear button, a short intake form and a phone number above the fold.
- Proof beside every button: named reviews, ratings and your team.
- Practice area pages written to rank for searches like divorce lawyer Toronto and child custody lawyer Toronto.
